

The Medal

Harry and Deji were going on a school trip to Weston beach. They each were handed a cheap metal detector and were asked to go looking for some small metal pieces. Harry went close to the water and heard a beeping noise coming from the metal detector. "I have found something!" shouted Harry. Harry and Deji started digging. Deji found the piece of metal, but this piece of metal wasn't any ordinary piece of metal. On the side of the medal it read, awarded for true bravery in the 1914-18 world war. The medal belonged to a man called Ollie.

He carefully pinned the medal to his t-shirt. Immediately, they were in a new world. They had been transported back in the time of 1914. All around them they could see people blowing up and losing their legs. Strangely they were transported back to the same place they had been in, back at the beach. But this was no beach anymore, this was a land mine field. The soldiers were being attacked from all sides. Next to Harry, a man in a smart uniform started to retreat along with his friends. The man was shot in the leg, Deji tried to save him but he was already dead. In the man's hand was a medal. The medal read, awarded for true bravery the same one round Deji's neck. Before he could grab the medal a man pointed a gun at his head. He quickly pulled the medal off his head. After he had pulled the medal off, they were transported back to the present. "What a journey," said Harry.